Those 3, with Birnie were the only whites at Astoria in 1844. Gave up the fight with Birnie in Nov., 1844, and in April, 1845, headed for Washington, D.C., where he convinced postal authorities he would make a good postmaster for Astoria. He returned to Astoria in 1847. History books say he went south to dig gold but according to his diary he went after a ship with which to deliver mail. He got the ship and was wrecked on return trip at mouth of Rogue river. T. P. Powers succeeded Shively and moved the post office to Uppertown.
